COLONIAL THEATRE.

"Captured by Mexicans" Kalem As-tounding Two Real Spectacles.

An exceptionally strong programme at the Colonial today is headed by the unique and thrilling story by the big Kalem cast, entitled, "Captured by Mexicans." This story tells of a transcontinental traveler and his wife, who befriended a thirsty Mexican, and later upon showing his ingratitude, they drive him from camp. Then he shoots and seriously wounds his benefactor, and escapes to the wilderness. The wife in the meantime attempts to get water to fill the water bottles, but the burly Mexican carries off her injured husband, and declares he is leader of a gang of outlaws, and he is promptly carried to Federal headquarters, where he is doomed to execution in the morning. Meanwhile the wife learns of his whereabouts, and hastening to the American counsel receives his aid, and her husband's life is saved, but the Mexican is put to death. Other films today are "Mother of Seven," "Hunger Knows No Law," "Vivian," and "He Said He Could Eat," a big comedy starring Lubin.

At the Auditorium, hovering around ninety the auditorium had plenty of air stirring with the fourteen fans working and it was really quite a comfortable place to sit. The show is the both vaudeville and pictures and is one of those good hot weather shows with plenty of singing, dancing and comedy and with no dramatic or anything one has to follow closely to enjoy. Vera and Bertie are two pretty dancing girls who are winning much applause and wearing several changes of neat costumes. The one-legged acrobat, Tom Haffron, is a wonder and does some startling stunts. Pierce and Allen have a lot of funny jokes and songs and keep everybody smiling. On the picture programme, the first picture is "The Abandoned Hope." There are also other pictures.
